SUBJECT: DWD Policy 2008-23
Payments to Be Considered Wages Subject to Unemployment Insurance Contribution

Purpose

To further define payments made by employers to employees that will or will not be considered as wages subject to unemployment insurance contribution

Rescission

None

Contents

In the interest of ensuring that contributions are paid on all compensation paid as a result of service performed by an employee for an employer, this Indiana Department of Workforce Development (IDWD) policy further explains items that will, in certain circumstances, be considered wages subject to contribution. Indiana Code § 22-4-4-1 and IC § 22-4-4-2 define wages, generally.

Employee discounts on purchases

Discounts allowed employees on the purchase of goods from the employer are not wages if the purchase is:

1. Optional for the employee; and
2. Discounts do not constitute regular or systematic remuneration for services rendered.

Meals and lodging

Meals and/or lodging will be considered wages subject to contribution when they are allowed by the employer to the employee as increased or additional compensation. The value as wages will be determined in the following manner:

1. Where the employer provides a fixed amount to the employee for meals and/or lodging, that amount will be considered the amount of additional remuneration.
2. Where it is not a fixed amount, the amount of additional remuneration will be the actual cost of the meals and/or lodging.

If, however, the meals and/or lodging are provided by the employer, on the premises of the employer, and for the convenience of the employer, then the meals/lodging and the value of the same will not be considered wages subject to contribution.

Wages in lieu of notice or termination allowances

Wages in lieu of notice or termination allowances include amounts paid by an employer to an employee at the time the employee is separated from employment with the employer. All such payments are deemed to be wages subject to contribution.
